WORLD INFLATION BY FORMATION OF ECONOMIC POOL PROPOSED

BRITAIN BEAT SPAIN IN DAVIS CUP

Perry And Austin
Win Singles.

MAIER'S GALLANT FIGHT

Barcelona, To-day.
Favoured to reach the Final Round of the European Zone of the Davis Cup Competition Great Britain yesterday eliminated Spain in the First Round by 4 matches to 1. Undaunted by the reverse sustained in the doubles Fred Perry gave Britain a triumph in the third singles by beating Sindreu in straight sets, and "Bunny" Austin won his match against E. Maier, also in straight sets.

THE DAVIS CUP

Britain 4; Spain 1.

The following were the full results of the encounter:—
F. J. Perry (Britain) beat E. Maier 7-5, 7-6, 6-2.

H. W. Austin (Britain) beat Sindreu 6-0, 6-3, 6-2.

E. Maier and Durall (Spain) beat F. J. Perry and G. P. Hughes 6-3, 6-1, 1-6, 4-6, 6-3.

F. J. Perry (Britain) beat Sindreu 6-1, 6-3, 6-0.

H. W. Austin (Britain) beat E. Maier 6-6, 7-5, 6-1.

Perry, who has just recovered from muscular strain in the forearm, found little difficulty in beating Sindreu, who is by no means up to the standard of international tennis. The young Spaniard was beaten by Austin in straight sets, capturing only five games in the three sets.

Austin revealed fine fighting spirit in the first two sets in his encounter with Maier, and carried all before him in the third set in which Maier cracked up under a barrage of devastating forehand drives.

Perry and Hughes gave rise to hopes for a clean-sweep British triumph when they drew on level terms with Maier and Durall, after dropping the first two sets, in the doubles match. The Spaniards, however, had more in reserve, and won the final set for the loss of three games.

The Spanish pair twice defeated Austin and J. S. Olliff in Riviera championships, and it was thought that the British selectors might give Austin and Perry an opportunity to play together. They partnered one another in the Queen's Club Championships last month.

Great Britain should now reach the final of the European Zone contest, as Italy, the only other notable contender in the top half of the draw, will be without the services of G. Palmieri.—Reuter.

MOTOR MISHAPS

Mr. D. Mackie Runs Down Boy.

Mr. D. J. Mackie, of the Eastern Extension Telegraph Co., was driving his car, No. 161, in the New Territories past Chin Wan, between the 6th and 7th milestones, when he knocked down a Chinese boy, Chan Tin Fook, 9, who was taken to the Kowloon Hospital in the car.

Mr. A. L. Rocha, of 759, Nathan Road, reported to the Police that at 3.55 p.m., yesterday, he was driving along Nathan Road, near Public Square Street, when he knocked down Chan Hoi, 15, of Temple Street, who was slightly injured and was taken to the Kowloon Hospital.

ECONOMIC EXPERTS IN WASHINGTON

SCHEME TO RAISE PRICES AND REST ORE TRADE

DISARMAMENT DISCUSSED BY BRITISH PREMIER AND MR. ROOSEVELT

WASHINGTON, TO-DAY.

DISARMAMENT WAS THE MAIN TOPIC OF DISCUSSION AT YESTERDAY'S CONVERSATIONS BETWEEN PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT AND THE BRITISH PREMIER, MR. RAMSAY MACDONALD, BUT THE WORLD'S ECONOMIC POSITION WAS SUBJECTED TO A SEARCHING SURVEY BY THE BRITISH AND AMERICAN ECONOMIC EXPERTS WHO ARE SAID TO HAVE CONSIDERED A SCHEME FOR WORLD INFLATION.

Former Premier E. Herriot of France has arrived in Washington, but has not yet joined in the discussions, his first consultations being with French officials. The Canadian Premier, Mr. R. B. Bennett, leaves Ottawa for Washington to-day. He will stay two days at the White House, two days at the Canadian Legation, and will leave on Friday.

Tremendous interest is being taken in these vital conversations, on the outcome of which the fate of the World Economic Conference depends. It is expected that provisional agreements will be reached on war debts, tariffs and currency questions. Later in the month delegates from other Powers, including Germany, Italy, Japan and China, will visit President Roosevelt.

President Roosevelt.

Currency On Gold And Silver Base.

NEW YORK REPORT OF PLAN FOR STABILITY.

Washington, To-day.

A multilateral treaty, stabilising currency by fixing the gold and silver parity perhaps on a 30 per cent. gold base and a 5 per cent. silver base, is one of the chief points which the British and American experts are seeking as a basis for Anglo-American accord prior to the World Economic Conference, according to the "New York Times."

Mr. Ramsay MacDonald is expected to issue a message to the nations within a week, announcing the date of the World Economic Conference in London on June 15, the newspaper states.

M. Herriot, the French delegate who arrived in New York yesterday, en route to Washington, to have a preliminary talk with President Roosevelt, has been instructed by the French Government, to urge an early date for the conference.—Reuter.

LOCAL DOLLAR STEADY.

Silver Declines.

The local dollar remained steady over the week-end and was quoted at 1/8 1/2 this morning.

Silver prices show a downward trend, spot dropping from 19 1/2 to 19 1/4, and forward from 19 9/16 to 19 5/16.

The London, on New York cross rates declined slightly, from 4-08 1/2 to 4-08 1/4 on Saturday to 4-08 1/4 this morning while the New York London rate gained slightly from 4-08 1/4 to 4-08 3/4.

Potomac Cruise Result.

CONFERENCE PROSPECTS ADVANCED.

Washington, To-day.
Cruising down the Potomac River yesterday, President Roosevelt and Mr. Ramsay MacDonald thoroughly surveyed the business of the Disarmament Conference.

On their return yesterday evening, the two Ministers declared, in a joint statement, that they felt that the results of the conversations will considerably advance the prospects of success both in the Disarmament Conference and the World Economic Conference.

President Roosevelt will continue disarmament discussions with M. Herriot.

The party yesterday included Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Miss Isabel MacDonald and a few friends. No Presidential advisers accompanied the President.

M. Herriot, the French Minister who will also discuss matters preparatory to the World Conference, was welcomed in New York on arrival yesterday, by Mr. William Cordell Hull, United States Secretary for State, and was besieged by crowds of newspaper men.

He gave a hint that he would raise the question of the organisation of international security when he said that he believed that political and economic problems must be studied together.

Immediately after landing, M. Herriot conferred with the French Ambassador and the experts.

Mr. MacDonald also expressed a hope, on arrival, that he would have a frank exchange of views on both political and economic problems, the most pressing of which, the Premier said, was the removal of economic distress.

The discussions between the British and American experts are clothed in secrecy at present, but it is believed that in addition to currency stabilisation they are considering world inflation by the formation of a financial pool.

The pool, it is understood, will consist of the wealthy nations with the idea of helping the weaker nations along the path of normal trade. This move will raise prices and restore international trade.

The experts are due to confer with President Roosevelt and Mr. MacDonald this evening.

New official badges of the German forces. President Von Hindenburg has ordered that the National Defence Corps should wear the Imperial cockade in the old Imperial colours of black-white-red on their field caps, and in the half-wreath of oak leaves on their service hats. On their steel helmets, in place of the former district colour badge, the same shield is worn, with the black-white-red colours painted on it. (S. & G.)

THE INCREDIBLE HAPPENS

U.S. Foreign Trade Vanishing.

DISASTROUS SLUMP

Washington.

The almost catastrophic slump in American export valuations from $5,240,000,000 in 1929 to $1,578,000,000 in 1932 offers an urgent and definite problem to the administration, according to the unanimous opinion of international circles here.

The United States, which, since the days of the Revolution, made foreign trade a primary objective of policy and a source of national pride, as in the Clipper Ship Era—cannot long defer vigorous steps for the recovery of foreign markets, disinterested diplomatic observers believe.

Two million jobs, by official estimate, hinge directly upon manufacturers' exports, while the merchant marine, railway trunk lines, cable companies, and port services are crying out through agents here against the adverse situation.

In the decade from 1920 to 1929, United States export trade seemed to have been stabilised at a figure in excess of $4,500,000,000 annually. This flourishing business was regarded as the "prosperity leeway" for American industry; it encouraged vast investments abroad, and hastened the development of a world-wide system of American-owned transport and communications facilities.

TOKYO TO PARIS FLIGHT

French Aviatrix Starts Return Trip.

EXPECTED IN HONG KONG ON WEDNESDAY

Tokyo, To-day.

Mlle. Maryse Hilt, the French aviatrix, took off from Seoul at 7.35 a.m. to-day, according to a message received here from Seoul. She is making for Peking, and from there it is expected that she will fly to Shanghai before coming to Hong Kong, where she is expected here on Wednesday.

Mlle. Hilt, who is now on her return journey to Paris, after making a successful Paris-Tokyo flight, will fly practically the same route as she did outward bound.

RAIL EMPLOYEES KIDNAPPED IN C. E. R. OUTRAGES

Manchukuo Garrison Mutinies At Tehpingling

Harbin, To-day.

A small Manchukuo garrison at Tehpingling on the Chinese Eastern Railway, mutinied yesterday, and abducted three railway employees. They have fled to the nearby hills, taking their captives with them.

In the vicinity of Welshaho, bandits pulled up the railway track and held up a freight train. All the train crew were carried off.—Reuter.

U.S. RECOGNITION OF SOVIET

New Administration's Attitude.

SPECULATION IN RUSSIAN BONDS

New York.

The attitude of the new administration in Washington toward the Russian Soviet Government is being watched closely and rather impatiently by some organisations, which are hoping to sell bonds of the Soviet to U. S. investors.

At least one newly-created firm has taken office in the Wall Street district and is making preparations for a Soviet bond-selling campaign. If the Roosevelt regime announces that it will recognize the Bolsheviks.

The bonds which it is hoped can be floated here are of the type maturing in five, ten and fifteen years and carrying interest rate of 10 per cent. in some issues. The obligations are directly those of the Soviet Government and both interest and principal are payable in gold.

So far as the sale of Soviet Bonds in the United States is concerned, the State Department hitherto has ruled that it will not lend its approval, although it has not directly prohibited their flotation.

In the event that the Roosevelt Government might decide on some form of official or semi-official commercial relations with Moscow, even if flat recognition is not granted, Soviet representatives hope that the Secretary of State may, at least not oppose the proposed bond offering.

Mr. Sam. M. Wilson, was sentenced to a term of 12 months in default of three months imprisonment, for being in possession of 31-Pa. Fin. lottery tickets at Passaic Street.

NEW YORK YANKEES LOSE IN U.S. BASEBALL

Senators Win Close Encounter.

PHILLIES RECORD "DOUBLE"

New York, To-day.

New York Yankees, World Baseball Champions, have been defeated for the first time this season. Washington Senators beat them by the close margin of 5 to 4.

This was not the only surprise in yesterday's programme. The Phillies trounced the Cardinals in both games of the season's first double-header. Maine pitched brilliantly to blank the 1931 champions in the first game.

Fitzsimmons batted out a homer for the Giants, but the effort proved unavailing, and the Pirates won by a 7 to 3 margin.

In the American League Lyons and Appling hit four-baggers to give Chicago White Sox a 4 to 1 win over the Indians, and Bridges blanked the Browns to give Detroit Tigers a long-awaited triumph.

The following were the results of yesterday's games as cabled by Reuter:—

JAPANESE CAPTURE KUPEIKOW

City Falls After Fierce Fighting.

CHINESE SUFFER HEAVY CASUALTIES

Tokyo Admits 21 Japanese
Troops Killed

Tokyo, To-day.

After fierce fighting, lasting since Friday, during which the Japanese forces were repulsed on several occasions, Kupeikow, the strategic point in Nantienmen, has now been captured by the Japanese following a Chinese onslaught near the city.

The Chinese suffered heavy casualties during the engagement, and it is estimated that half a division of men was lost. Official Japanese figures put the Japanese losses at 21 killed and 43 wounded.—Reuter.

This renewal of fighting has destroyed the optimism created by the announcement issued from Tokyo on Saturday that the Japanese forces had been ordered to cease operations and halt pursuit. In some Chinese quarters it is feared that if the Chinese bring up more reinforcements, the Japanese onslaught may be renewed on a more intensive scale.

RECAPTURE CHIENAN AFTER STIFF FIGHTING.

Peking, To-day.

Chinese reports, which are officially confirmed, state that yesterday General Shang Chen's troops recaptured the Luan Ho and, after stiff fighting, managed to recapture Chienan from the Japanese, who are reported to be retreating to Leng-kow.—Reuter.

He asked that the defendant be committed to the House of Detention until something could be done for him.

THINGS FEMINE

FROM LONDON

Linen Trousers For Tennis.

CHROMIUM FOR BEACH-WEAR

London. Women are to rustle again. One London designer is equipping all of his light summer frocks with taffeta slips. He favours them for afternoon dresses—to give elegance. One of his models was a black and white taffeta dress for Ascot. It rustled too, and with it was worn the same scout which Queen Victoria used to wear.

Chromium is being worn with bathing suits now. From bathtub fixtures to bathing suit accessories this metal has passed in its popularity. New models show bathing costumes with a chromium non-flexible collar, a chromium flexible girdle, and a chromium monogram.

Black, lacquered satin was the material of which the blouse to a new London tweed suit was made.

A smart necklace shown in London is of large, bluish pearl buttons, sewn close together on a band of material, the same buttons are used as trimming on the dress.

Long linen trousers are appearing in dress shows for women to wear on the tennis courts. Linen—made up into bell-bottomed trousers—is also favoured for yachting suits.—Reuter.

Trunkload Of Clothes.

Paris. IMAGINE it! Just walking right in and ordering a whole trunkload of Chanel clothes in one fell swoop!

Well, Madame Henri Garat did it. She used to be one of the famous Rowe sisters. The trunkload of clothes is on the way to Hollywood. Now about the clothes. For traveling she chose a tailor-made costume. In brick red tweed with white pique collar and cuffs and a white pique gilet.

She also chose an ensemble with a long navy blue coat of diagonal Chanel wool lined with praline pink woolly material. The dress accompanying this coat is made of the same fabric as the lining.

For the afternoon Mme. Garat selected a very simple dress in beige marocain made with an open-work yoke and edging of open-work to the short sleeves.

BRITISH EMPIRE

FROCKS.

London Fashions For Women Overseas.

Women in every remote corner of the British Empire may soon be as fashionably dressed as their London friends.

British Consuls and Trade Commissioners all over the world are supplying the British Colour Council—the organisation which creates colour fashions—with the names of traders and manufacturers in their areas.

The Council will send them fashion information which will enable them to launch their new season's styles at the same time as they are introduced in London and Paris.

Local conditions, of course, will be borne in mind, but the co-ordination plan will prevent far-away manufacturers from guessing and then having to pay for their mistakes with unsold goods.

PROBLEM OF SPRING

PRINTS

Quiet Colours Best For Day Wear.

If you are the kind of woman who simply can't stand to see your neighbour, or the woman you don't like on the next street or the girl in the next office wear the same dress you are wearing, then prints become a problem.

The only way to solve it is to pick a print that is unusual, in design or in colour and to get one that is made with originality.

A fine print, with a design that doesn't hit you in the face is usually best. You don't tire of it so easily. And, by and large, such a print is more becoming to most women than splashy ones, which should be kept for evenings.

Very new this spring is the dress that has both a high neck and a tunic. They are two points on which you can have some security of exclusiveness.

A very lovely navy blue, lighter blue and white print of fine silk crepe has both a long tunic and a high neck. More than that, there is a very quaint and appealing round yoke of white on to which the print is applied following its own design, with the little leaves extending up onto the yoke.

The tunic skirt fastens on the side with big buttons, which extend the length of the three-quarters tunic. The belt fastens in the black with the same kind of button.

Puffed sleeves that can be slipped up over the elbow or worn just below, make this an ideal dress for both a spring ensemble, worn with a coat or cape, and for the warm days that quickly come, when no wrap is necessary but still you want to feel well-dressed when venturing forth.

CINEMA NOTESMAIL REVIEW*"INDISCREET"—KING'S THEATRE.

Gloria Swanson, star of "The Trespasser" scores a distinct triumph in "Indiscreet" the United Artists film now showing at the King's Theatre.

The film which is classed as comedy-drama, revolves round a modern girl's crusade to prevent a rejected suitor from marrying her younger sister, with sometimes amusing and something near tragic results.

Both Gloria Swanson and Ben Lyon who fill the major roles share acting honours, while Monroe Oweley as the villain and Barbara Kent and Arthur Lake fill the juvenile roles to perfection.

MAIL REVIEW"FLESH"—QUEEN'S THEATRE.

Wallace Beery, famous featured player of record breaking films, gives another of his flawless performances in "Flesh" which is now showing at the Queen's Theatre.

Beery who portrays a wrestler out for world honours, looks and acts the part to something almost approaching perfection. The story is the usual one, wound round the gold digger who deserts the sinking ship for a better prize.

Karen Morley is excellent in the part of "Laura," while Ricardo Cortez is charming as "Nicky" her new lover.

MAIL REVIEW"CARNIVAL BOAT"—CENTRAL THEATRE.

Bill Boyd and Ginger Rogers, the two feature players who made such a tremendous hit in "Suicide Fleet" are brought together again in "Carnival Boat" which is now showing at the Central Theatre.

A story of the great lumber camps of British Columbia, the film is full of good clean action and abounds with thrills. Boyd, the son of the lumber camp father falls in love with Rogers.

Obstacles however fall in their way, Boyd's father objects to their romance and a rival camp tries to wreck their works.

The scenes throughout the film are very good and interesting. Hobart Bosworth carries the film through with his dynamic personality as the camp factor.

MAIL REVIEW"FAIR WARNING"—STAR THEATRE.

George O'Brien who has already succeeded Tom Mix as the Cowboy "King" gives another excellent performance in "Fair Warning" which is now showing at the Star Theatre.

A Western thriller, the film abounds with gun play and thrilling suspense. The action is clean and plentiful and there is enough romance to make the film interesting.

The scenic effects are outstanding and the photography good.

MAIL REVIEW"THE LOVE DEBT"—ORIENTAL THEATRE.

Based on the life story of the actress herself, Lai Ming-tay, is culminating in the sensational Fung Murder Trial. "The Love Debt" is now playing to crowded houses at the Oriental Theatre.

The producers have tried to get as near as possible to the details, but have not been very successful.

MISS LYDIA MICHEL TO GIVE CONCERT

Talented German Singer Delights Manila.

A select and appreciative audience gave Miss Lydia Michel, German mezzo-soprano, a generous reception at her concert sponsored by the Association Musical de Filipinas at the German Club at Manila, recently.

Miss Michel selected for her pieces gay and delightful songs by such beloved composers as Schubert, Brahms and Richard Strauss, which revealed her lyrical powers, and an air from "Samson and Delilah" by Saint-Saens which was her most ambitious undertaking of the evening.

The German singer was particularly delightful in Strauss' "Dream In the Twilight" and "The Lover's Pledge," which brought out the rich quality of her voice and her artistic sensitiveness.

The second part of the programme consisted of an air from "Samson and Delilah" which Miss Michel sung with such sympathetic understanding that it was warmly applauded again and again by the audience.

But Miss Michel was never more at home than in her concluding number of German folksongs. She brought forth the old rural spirit of her native country, laughed with the audience, and carried them with the simplicity and beauty of her themes.

The concert revealed Miss Michel to be a singer of great ability, her voice has warmth, richness, and tonal colouring; she was emotionally sincere and earnest.

Miss Michel will give a concert at the Hong Kong Hotel Roof Garden on Thursday next.

LESSON SERMON.

First Church of Christ, Scientist—Hong Kong.

"Probation after death" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, April 23rd.

The Golden Text was: "He that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved" (Matt. 24:13).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "If the clouds be full of rain, they empty themselves upon the earth; and if the tree fall toward the south, or toward the north, in the place where the tree falleth, there it shall be" (Eccl. 11:3).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science text-book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "In the place where the tree falleth, there it shall be." So we read in Ecclesiastes. This text has been transformed into the popular proverb, "As the tree falls, so it must lie." As man falleth asleep, so shall he awake. As death endeth mortal man, so shall he be after death, until probation and growth shall effect the needed change." (P. 291:19-25).

The film is in Chinese with English captions every now and then.

MAIL REVIEW"CHANDU THE MAGICIAN"—MAJESTIC THEATRE.

The Fox production, "Chandu The Magician," which is now showing at the Majestic Theatre, is an amazing mixture of fantasy and comedy, served up with all the extravagance of scenery and settings of which Hollywood is capable.

Edmund Lowe as Chandu, Bela Lugosi as Roxor, and others make this a very entertaining film.

BRIDGE NOTESGRAND SLAM BIDDING.

The premiums provided for grand slams by the new laws (they should be referred to as Laws and not rules as there is a distinction and a difference) present a fresh problem for the thoughtful player.

It was recognized that the old bonuses, large and even excessive as to some players they appeared, were not large enough to warrant the risk of failure, which amounted to more than twice as much as the gain. The grand slam bidder who falls by one-trick loses not merely a penalty but also the value of the certain game he has thrown away, the little slam premium and the points he would have scored for tricks. Under the new code the rewards are greater than the old, 1,500 points when not vulnerable and no fewer than 2,250 when vulnerable. The equity of the larger figures cannot be doubted by the mathematically minded on the principle that the greater the risk the greater should be the reward.

The grand slam bidder who takes the risk—and, leaving out of consideration those very rare and occasional smashing hands when it is a certainty, the bidding of a grand slam is always a risk—now receives a commensurate recompense for his daring.

It has been said that the large slam bonuses are baits to catch the greedy and that they promote the gambling spirit which, in a game of the nature of Contract Bridge, is to be deplored. It is also asserted that as the result of the new scoring many little slams will be missed in the endeavour to achieve the bigger coup. The player who can just make his twelve tricks, but by no possibility can make the thirteenth, is sure to incur the wrath of his partner for his failure. He has thrown away too much.

The new premiums, tempting as they are, have not, of course, altered the risks. While the little slam can be called when there is an even chance of making it, the grand slam bid should be made only when it is odds on the Declarer at least two to one. It is not merely difficult, it is, in fact, usually impossible to tell when this situation arises. In my experience so far, after consulting several leading players, the new count had made no appreciable difference in the bidding of grand slams at the chief London clubs. The foolhardy attempt them, often coming to grief in the process (when successful they are no longer "foolhardy" but "foreseeing" in the eyes of those who judge only by results). But the prudent player still fights shy of the grand slam contract after weighing the cost.

At the same time the additional rewards have caused a number of players, especially Duplicate Tournament players, to try to discover a technical whereby a grand slam can be called with comparative safety. The tendency is to revert to the idea of Ace showing, or as some call it, "feature" showing. This was introduced in the early days of Contract from America, but was, after a trial, abandoned as unsound. The mere showing of Aces, desirable as it may seem, is not sufficient to ensure the success of a grand slam bid. An Ace alone is likely to be a valuable asset, especially in Dummy's hand, but the showing of an ace when accompanied by one or more small cards to indicate command of the suit may not be adequate. It is always helpful to learn that the Ace is there, but before a grand slam can be embarked upon it is necessary also to know that no tricks will be lost in the suit. By deduction from systematic bidding it is often possible to arrive at results which are not possible for the "natural" bidder. There can be no doubt at all that in the majority of cases, to achieve the grand slam conventions are necessary. Ace showing and cue bidding fell into disrepute because they were used in the early days indiscriminately and in haphazard fashion. It is now realized that Aces should not be shown until a suit has been agreed-upon or established. That is to say, when both partners have called it.

How can grand slams be called when the strength is distributed fairly evenly between the two hands? It can be done only by a process of exchange of conversation between partners, and then only on the solid foundation of the initial bid. The tendency by some players to "shade" opening bids and to make them on hands containing only one quick trick or one and a half may give flexibility, but certainly increases the difficulty and the danger. The more severe the requirements for the initial bid the safer the subsequent procedure.

Opening bids of Two, whether made on the Approach Forcing system or on the lines of Two Club bidding, are the best recognized overtures, but the grand slam can be built up from an initial bid of One, provided it is solid and conveys a definite message. The Three bid is used by some players as an encouragement to a slam showing the possession of a hand worth nine or ten tricks in play and usually indicating a long suit of seven or more. But this bid is not standardized and is therefore, without explanation, ambiguous. The strong Two still holds pride of place as an inducement, and it has a very definite meaning and significance.

THE name Pirandello is generally considered frightening by people with ordinary, or human, brows.

None of us need be frightened this time.

Pirandello's book of short stories, "Better Think Twice About It," published by John Lane at 7s. 6d., is a work that takes us a long way from the involutions of Pirandello the playwright.

You will find there tragedy, comedy, farce—all in the true tradition of the short story—little windows on life, with a stimulating view.

Read "The Jar," and then you will read the other thirteen stories that make up the book.

This is the first time that this famous Italian writer's stories have appeared in English as a collection.

STEPHEN GRAHAM is a name well known, both as biographer and journalist.

Here, published by Benn at 3s. 6d., is an example of Stephen Graham as novelist—a good example.

His book, "One of the Ten Thousand," tells the love story of a crook.

This crook is imprisoned for a crime of which he was innocent, although he had been guilty of many.

He is known to the police as "one of the ten thousand" whose records are on the files.

In this tale, if he obtains his release, he runs the risk of ruining an innocent woman. What is he to do?

Read this book—and read it for this, if only for this—that you will find an astonishing picture of life in prison besides a drama that will hold you.

THE name Watson in detective fiction has been for years associated with an almost incredible degree of fatuous credulity: for was not Dr. Watson the patient whipping boy of the insufferable Sherlock Holmes?

Now here is a book, "Transatlantic Ghost," by Miss Dorothy Gardiner, published by Harrap at 7s. 6d., and containing a nervous detective with the fatal name of Watson.

There is also a Cairn terrier who helps him to solve the mystery of how two people were shot in a haunted room.

Incidentally, Miss Gardiner was born in Italy, and had her fingerprints taken when she was three hours old—all because her father, a pupil of Thomas Huxley, was helping Sir Francis Galton with his work on finger-prints.

One might almost say, therefore, that crime is in Miss Gardiner's blood.

You will like this book.

AND here is another crime book—"X v. Rex," by Martin Porter. (Collins, 7s. 6d.)

When I tell you that it is a Crime Club book, and that in addition it is recommended by the Book Society, you may or may not be impressed.

But when I tell you that the story is about an unknown killer, "X," who commits murder after murder, each one having for victim some guardian of the law, and that this unknown death-quantity, "X," plunges the country into terror, and involves the Cabinet—then, I think, you may be interested.

Anyway, you ought to be.

THERE is to be something interesting in a house that talks, especially when it talks about the people who live in it.

Houses do, indeed, seem to have a life of their own, to be the harbours of secrets that generations of men and women have left behind them in the walls.

Here in "Penny Cot," by Elisabeth Fagan (Grayson, 7s. 6d.), a house is made to tell the story of those who lived in it.

It is the tale of a family penny-wise and life-spillish.

And you have a murder and a ghost laying.

Bricks and mortar speak dramatically of flesh and blood.

DR. HALLIDAY SUTHERLAND is already well known—in fact, better than well known—in his own profession of medicine.

Here in his book, "The Arches of the Years" (Geoffrey Bles, 10s. 6d.), he reveals himself as a man of adventures and memories.

As a child he learned the curious legends and superstitions of the Highlands. Later, when a student, he visited the Shetlands, and went on a whaling expedition.

And then, as a young doctor, he travelled to the south of Spain to work in a clinic.

But he became a lover of bull-fighting, and even took a hand in it himself.

He tells some heart-stirring stories of his experiences as a doctor.

There was, for example, the working woman whose husband had died in a building accident.

She called at the dispensary one day with a boy of eight, and asked the doctor if the boy's chest was sound.

Dr. Sutherland thought that she was the boy's grandmother, but at this she protested that she was only his foster-mother.

"I had fourteen of my own," she said. "... When all the children left home I took this one. ... My husband and I had become that fond of the child we couldn't send him to the poorhouse.

"So we adopted him legally."

The child was healthy enough, but Dr. Sutherland found in the mother's neck a serious disease.

Yet she had never complained, never thought of going to a doctor.

And side by side with these little tragedies you will find comedies. And at the end the far and lovely islands of the Outer Hebrides.

IN DEFENCE OF THE TIGER

"Brave Beast Who Will Fight To Death."

A CLASSIC OF THE JUNGLE

London.

Brigadier-General R. G. Burton has killed tigers by the hundred. Now he has written a book in their defence.

For though General Burton agrees that tigers must be kept within bounds—they still kill more than a thousand human beings every year—he has been all his life a devoted student and a fervent admirer of "this brave beast who will fight to the death."

The tiger, General Burton declares, has been unjustly stigmatised as cruel and bloodthirsty. He is no more bloodthirsty than caracal, leopard, or panther.

That he does his own killing while man usually has his killing done for him, amounting in Great Britain to 40,000 creatures slaughtered daily for food. The animal killed by the jaws of a wild beast probably suffers no more than one done to death with a pole-axe or even a "humane-killing."

"The Book of the Tiger" (Hutchinson 12/6) certainly deserves a place among the classics of the jungle. It is packed with anecdotes and information.—Reuter.

"MURDER BY SUGGESTION"

by Edward Acheson, is a detective story about which even the publishers, Messrs. Hutchinson, refuse to say anything.

This is because you have an unusual plot and an unusual method, and to talk about either would spoil both.

But I will tell you this—you will find excitement—a sound 7s. 6d. worth of it.

BY this time everybody knows the story of "Rome Express"—one of the best films I have seen, and British at that.

Well, here is the novel of the film, written by Ruth Alexander (author of the book of the play "The Ghost Train") and Clifford Grey.

It is published by Arrowsmith at 7s. 6d., and it is good, exciting entertainment all through.

Have your money ready, please.

THE conflict between two equally strong wills becomes a fight to the bitter end. The actual finish is a thrill of startling delight.

In these moderate words Messrs. Mills and Bohn conclude their remarks concerning the novel "Lady Gone Wild," by Phyllis Gordon Demarest (7s. 6d.), which they print on the inside fold of a jacket showing a most attractive young female seated on a champagne cork.

When I say that the young female is called Roxane, and that she has a perfectly fearful time of it with one Kirt Paton, a gambler—"society" to boot—you will need no further recommendation. You will obviously read the book if only in order to find out what I have not told you. A.P.

OTHER NEW NOVELS

"The Crystal" By Caroline Kennedy. (Hutchinson, 7s. 6d.) The scene of "The Crystal" opens on a coffee plantation in Southern India, where little Laura, a young girl, is devoted to two people, the handsome young man, Tim, and her Eurasian nurse, Annie. The scene shifts to England—the child is now in the sole charge of Miss, her dead mother's friend.

Here the transplanted Annie, who is inclined to talk the language of the English suburbs rather than that of Southern India, tells Laura her fate as revealed in a crystal. This sort of thing is by no means new, but the author has contrived to give to the windings of Laura's life story exactly that impress of fatality which the crystal had reflected. It is a promising first novel, and, apart from Laura, Miss is a distinctly well-realised character drawn in the round.

"Terror Tower" By Charles Rushon. (Jenkins, 7s. 6d.)

A Scotland Yard detective on holiday found a man's headless body floating at the edge of an evil-looking and evil-reputed loch. Scarcely had the local village recovered from this astounding report than the headless body of a woman was found in the same place. Meanwhile in the village itself two women had disappeared, one a mental case who would only have gone away with someone she knew and the other a cripple who could not possibly walk herself. And finally the inmate of a nearby public mental institution had been missing for some days.

This was indeed a problem for a Yard man to get his teeth into, but the chief constable of the county would have nothing to do with him. He was determined to solve the problem with his own force.

For answer readers must turn to Mr. Rushon's book, which is rightly named, for there is a terrifying incident in every chapter and a development on nearly every page.

"Gun Cotton—Adventurer" By Rupert Grayson. (Grayson, 7s. 6d.)

"Gun" Cotton, Mr. Grayson's dashing hero, is becoming a familiar figure to readers of adventurous fiction. In this further instalment of his experiences our latter-day D'Artagnan rings the bell again.

In New York "Gun" Cotton becomes involved in a desperate battle of wits with beer barons and other lords of the underworld, who resent his intrusion in their liquor racket. For a time things go very badly indeed, but he is a hero who has to be put on his mettle before the full extent of his resource and daring can be displayed. After a somewhat leisurely beginning Mr. Grayson increases the pace, and his best chapters have all the speed and colourfulness of a first-rate gangster film.

"The Boat of Longing" By O. E. Rolvaag. (Harpers, 7s. 6d.)

Those who like Scandinavian literature will enjoy this book. It contains some descriptive passages of real beauty; and only occasionally is the effect marred by a crude colloquialism that hints that the writer is not using his native language.

The characters are well drawn, if all very much of the same type—and that a type not familiar here. The author knows his landscape and the mentality of his people very surely. A brooding melancholy fills the atmosphere, and there is a feeling that Fate, unhurriedly, is shepherding the character to their doom.

GREAT CAREER OF E. TEMPLE THURSTON

"The Wandering Jew" Brings Fame.

EARLY SUCCESSES

The death of E. Temple Thurston, announced recently, brings the number of deaths of famous authors in the first few months of the year up to four. George Moore, John Galsworthy and George Saintsbury had lived their three score years and ten, but Temple Thurston has died comparatively a young man, in his 54th year. He was thrice married, the last time in 1925.

In 1895, when he was only 16, two books of poems by him were published. His first play, "Red and White Earth," was produced in 1902. From 1905, novels, plays and poems flowed from his pen at the rate of one and often two a year. His play "Charmouse" was written in 1930. In the same year he had two other publications, "The Rosicrucian" and "The Man in a Black Hat." One of his most successful novels was "Over the Hill."

"The Wandering Jew." His fame rests, however, on his powerful play "The Wandering Jew," written in 1920.

The Ceylon Dramatic League chose this for their first production. It netted about Rs. 9,000, but the C.D.L. profited very little by it, the production expenses being over Rs. 8,000.

The Wandering Jew was a legendary Jew, doomed to wander till the second coming of Christ, because he taunted Jesus as He passed bearing the cross, saying "Go quicker," Jesus replied, "I go, but thou shalt wait till I return." This legend first appears in a pamphlet alleged to have been printed at Leyden in 1602. The legend met with ready acceptance and was used by many European novelists and dramatists of the 17th and 18th centuries.

Autograph Hunting. The influence of Temple Thurston's "Wandering Jew" on women's minds when it was successfully produced in London with Matheson Lang in the central part is shown by this story.

A theatrical manager was leaving after seeing the play when two young women asked for his autograph. He felt quite flattered and readily obliged, but his face fell when the women explained:

"You see, you are the only man we have ever met who knows Mr. Temple Thurston."

GALSWORTHY BOOM

Sale Of Books Double Since His Death.

The novels of Mr. John Galsworthy have sold twice as rapidly since his death.

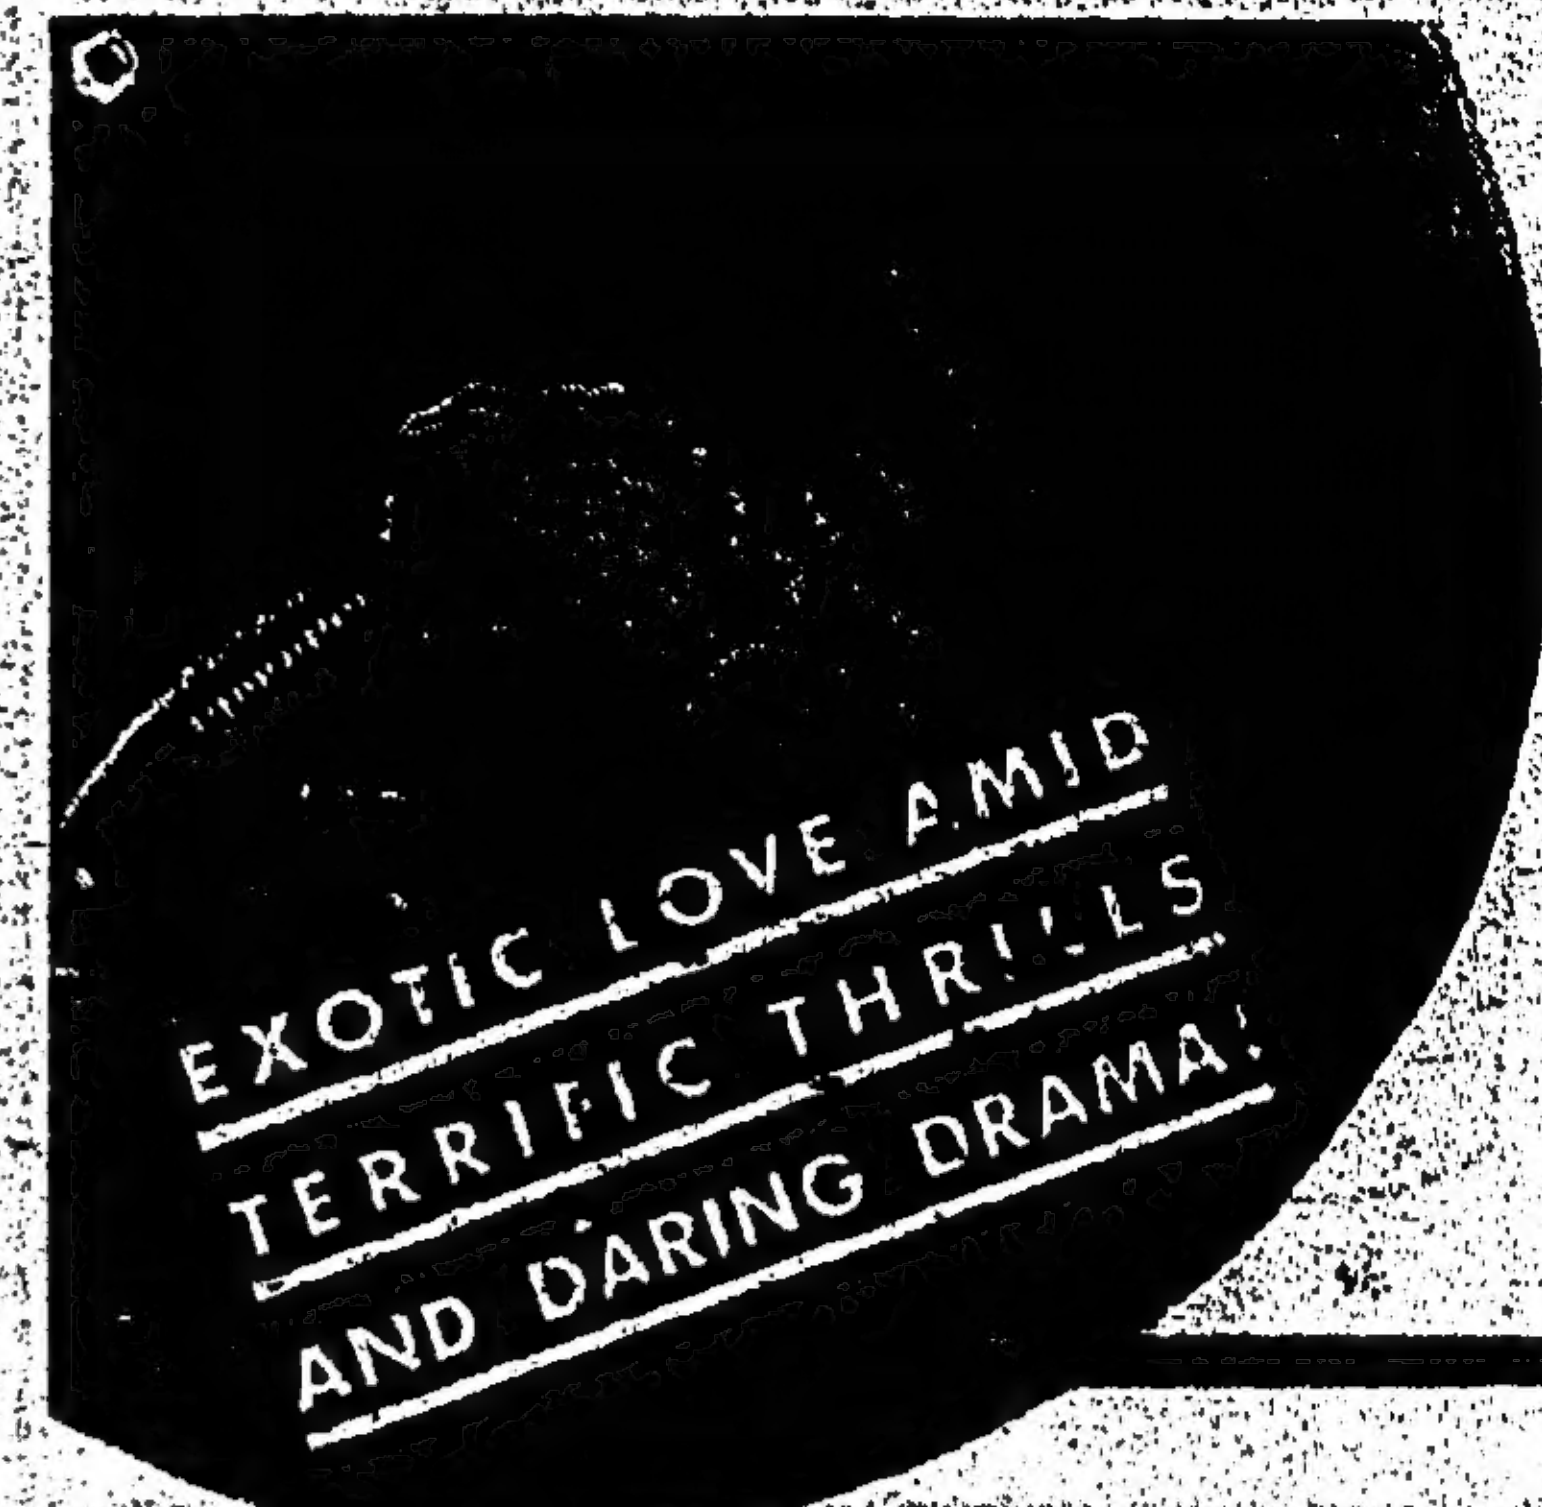

A first edition of "The Forsyte Saga" sold the other day for £15. A London bookseller recently said: "Galsworthy's 'The Forsyte Saga' sold for £15. His 'The End of the Affair' is selling about £20 for a first edition. It is now selling for £30."

Two other popular works of first editions are "Modern Comedy" and "Fanny Hill," which have been in print since 1911.

The Housing Problem In Britain.

While the British Government's Housing Bill, which has been passed in all stages by the House of Commons, contains many admirable features, the solution of the housing problem may be more adequately reached by the Committee which has been set up under Lord Moyne to study the possibilities of reconditioning as an aid in slum clearance and of enlisting public utility societies on a large scale in the building of working-class houses. The time has come to abolish the subsidy to municipal building and to concentrate public assistance in the form of subsidies upon slum clearance. Indeed the Labour Party's refusal to serve upon Lord Moyne's Committee is a particularly foolish example of how political theory may obscure practical policy; for the refusal is due to the obstinate assertion that nothing can produce houses to let cheaply except subsidized municipal enterprise. Nevertheless the appointment of the Committee is a welcome proof that the Government are ready to welcome friendly criticisms of their present scheme, which proposes to rely upon an intensification of the use of the Act of 1930 for slum clearance and upon an arrangement concluded with the building societies for new building, in addition to any unsubsidized building which may be carried out by local authorities. The objects of their policy must be to achieve what Housing Acts so far have signally failed to achieve—namely, slum clearance on a really substantial scale and the provision of houses within the means of the more poorly paid wage earners. As regards slum clearance, nobody can really tell except by trial how much concentration upon the Act of 1930 will effect. The Minister of Health has announced his determination to require local authorities to make a new survey of slum property in their areas, and to prepare plans for dealing with all such properties, whether by clearance or by reconditioning, upon a definite time schedule. It may be hoped that this will produce substantially better results than in the past. With regard to new building the prospects under the Bill are still obscure. The Minister said that he relied greatly upon unsubsidized building by local authorities, and it can only be hoped that the concentration of their efforts upon slum clearance will mean no slackening in the rest of new building. It has been estimated that if a local authority can borrow at four per cent money repayable over sixty years, then it can construct houses costing £280 to let at a rental more than sufficient to cover a week, inclusive of rates. But when the plan for enlisting private enterprise is analyzed it will be found that the rent of houses to be built under the arrangement with the building societies is not likely to be less than twelve shillings a week. There is therefore no definite guarantee that the Bill will produce in the first instance houses sufficiently cheap, in sufficient quantities, and at a sufficiently regular rate to meet the needs of the present housing problem. The more this question is studied, the more attractive becomes the suggestion of forming a public utility corporation pledged to a large and definite programme of house-building, co-ordinating all forms of house-building for the working classes, cooperating closely with the building industry and with all bodies, whether municipal or private, concerned with building, and financed by private capital cheaply provided in return for some Government guarantee. The Minister has frequently declared that he would, in no circumstances replace a direct subsidy by an indirect subsidy; but it may be hoped that this does not mean the ruling out of any extension of the guarantee principle. There are great difficulties, no doubt, in devising a practical scheme for the formation of such a corporation. Yet nothing would appear to offer a better prospect of achieving the triple object of a sound housing policy—namely, better employment, more public economy, and an adequate supply of cheap but good houses.

Fairer Kashmir.

A year has passed since publication of the Report of the Commission appointed by the Maharajah of Kashmir to investigate the grievances of his Moslem subjects. Since then his new Prime Minister, Colonel Colvin, has been engaged in carrying into effect the main recommendations of the Report; and a study of his administrative reforms shows that several notable causes of complaint have already been removed. Mosques which for generations had been put to secular uses have been or are being restored to the Moslem community. The burden of the grazing tax has been lightened and its inequalities have been removed. Measures have been taken against corruption in the lower ranks of the State Civil Service, and the striking disparity between the numbers of the Moslem majority in Kashmir and the number in Governmental posts is being remedied. One of the chief causes of the communal disturbances which afflicted Kashmir in the autumn of 1931 was the belief that Moslem education, especially in its highest branches, had been neglected by the British. The Government have now been successful in securing a more equitable distribution of educational opportunities. THROUGH THE GAP

At the park gates is the beginning of the finest hunting country in the world, and in the old days the Lord Lieutenant and his suite used to drive down to the various meets by coach.

The lodge itself is a long white building. The side that faces the mountains looks across a formal garden, with a special entrance direct from the park through a gap in the yew hedge.

It was through this gap that Lord Spencer, looking out from one of the windows, saw what he thought was a brawl taking place in the road that runs through the park. The "brawl" was the murder of Lord Frederick Cavendish and Mr. Burke.

"No, sir," was the reply. "We really cannot spare you the time at present."

"Well, sir," persisted the salesman dejectedly, "would you mind if I opened my bag here and took a look myself. I haven't seen 'em for nearly three weeks."

Their success will ultimately depend upon the relations between the Moslem majority in Kashmir and the remarkably able and intelligent Brahmin community, famous throughout India as the Kashmiri Pandits. Their small aristocracy has given British India, and the Indian States many distinguished officials and political leaders.

Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru and Pandit Malaviya are incidentally of Kashmiri Brahmin stock, and it is naturally being inclined to oppose changes which seemed to threaten the ascendancy of the Kashmiri Moslems, on the other hand, have on occasion pushed their claims too far and have not always remembered that the chief object of some of their most ardent friends in British India was to "unbarrass" Government.

Of late, however, there have been signs of improvement in Hindu-Moslem relations in the State, and it is hoped that the Government will be able to maintain the peace and harmony which have been achieved.

RAMSAY MACDONALD AND IL DUCE PEN PICTURE OF FAMOUS PERSONALITIES

CONTRADICTORY TEMPERAMENTS BUT SIMILAR CAREERS

(By George Slocombe.)

Which of the two men who met of the MacDonalds in the Socialist International and the Turatis in his own Italian party.

He preached revolution by violent methods. On the eve of the war he led the revolutionary majority of the Italian Socialist Party, while in Great Britain MacDonald stood as the unchallenged champion of a majority in the Labour movement pledged to the mildest of social reforms.

Worlds Apart.

Even then, in mentality as well as in manner, the two men were worlds apart.

The war was to separate them even more. At its outbreak Mussolini opposed the war, opposed Italian intervention, and called for a revolutionary uprising in all countries to withstand it.

Within six months he had changed his ground. He became as violent an interventionist as previously he had been a violent disciple of the attitude proclaimed by Lenin. He declared his views at a congress of the Italian Socialists, was outvoted and expelled from the Party.

With French Government funds—conveyed to him, ironically enough, by two French Socialists, one of whom was Marcel Cachin, the present leader of the French Communist Party—he founded the Popolo d'Italia, the newspaper which was to drive Italy into the war, and which is to-day the organ of the Italian Fascists.

But if Mussolini's interventionist policy succeeded, he returned from his military service on the Italian front to find himself, during the four years that immediately followed the war, the obscure if vociferous leader of a minority. MacDonald's own position in politics during the same years was equally inconspicuous. They were, both returned to active politics, the one to power, the other to leadership, in 1922.

But whereas Mussolini seized the dictatorship at the head of an army of young anti-Socialist Italians, most of them new to the political scene, Ramsay MacDonald, after eight years of ostracism, returned to the leadership of his party—and ultimately to the Premiership—by the votes of the Clydeside Socialists whom he was afterwards dramatically to disown.

The Drift from Democracy. In the years that followed Mr. MacDonald's steady drift away from the democratic origins of his Party brought him inevitably, in 1931, to the attitude that Mussolini, more boldly, more logically, assumed in 1914. Strangely enough, neither man is quite certain in his heart of his own philosophy.

Mr. MacDonald, with his characteristic lack of lucidity of mind, still proclaims himself a Socialist.

But Mussolini, whose early Socialism has proved an admirable and historical training for his later career, enabling him to regard other famous spokesmen—Aristide Briand, Millerand, Viviani—with a cynical understanding but also the eye of disillusionment. Is still I suspect, more of a Socialist at heart than MacDonald.

Fair weather, with moderate East winds, is forecasted. In today's report issued from the Royal Observatory this morning.

H. M. S. CUMBERLAND
ARRIVES*Two Troopships Also In Harbour.*NEW AIRCRAFT CARRIER DUE
HERE IN JUNE

H.M.S. Cumberland of the Fifth Cruiser Squadron, arrived in Hong Kong this morning from England and Singapore. While in England she was refitted and re-commissioned.

H.M.S. Vindictive (ex Cavendish) arrived in Hong Kong yesterday with reliefs for the China Station.

The Vindictive will leave for Singapore and England on May 5. H.M.S. Curacao arrived in Hong Kong on Saturday night from Singapore and England. She will leave for Hankow on May 1, where she will temporarily relieve H.M.S. Craddock, which will come to Hong Kong for refit. The Curacao is carrying reliefs for the Yangtze River Station.

H.M. Aircraft Carrier Hermes will leave for Tsingtau on Thursday, and will be accompanied by the Destroyer Wishart. She will be away for just under a month, arriving back in time to be relieved by the Aircraft Carrier Eagle.

H.M.S. Eagle, one of the largest of Britain's aircraft carriers, will arrive in Hong Kong on June 10.

Having a normal displacement tonnage of 22,600 tons, the Eagle has a flight deck of 100 feet. Her over-all length is 667 feet, her beam 105 feet, and a draught of 27 feet.

Laid down originally in 1913 as a dreadnought battleship for the Chilean Navy, she was unfinished by 1917, when the British Admiralty bought her from the Chilean Government for £1,334,358.

In that latter year Sir E. H. Tennyson d'Eyncourt, famous naval architect, was responsible for her conversion into an aircraft carrier. She was first commissioned on April 13, 1920, but her trials proved unsatisfactory and further modifications were made. She was finally completed in 1925. The sums subsequently spent on modifications raised her total cost to £4,617,636 (Statement by the First Lord of the Admiralty, April, 1927).

The Eagle has been for some time under repair at Devonport, and was commissioned for the China Station on January 9.

Captain Lionel V. Wells, D.S.O., who had recently been serving in the aircraft carrier Furious in the Home fleet, was appointed to command the Eagle on March 15, 1933.

Nine Planes in Flight.

Originally carrying three flights consisting of one Spotter Reconnaissance, one Fighter (Flycatcher) and one Torpedo (Dart), the Eagle will now bring out the reconstituted No. 405 (Fleet Fighter) Flight, formerly in the Glorious, in the Mediterranean.

Five aircraft will accompany the flight and on arrival in Hong Kong four more will be added from No. 403 Flight, in the Hermes, bringing No. 405 up to an establishment of nine aircraft instead of the usual six.

Formerly No. 405 Flight was equipped with the Fairey Flycatcher, but is being re-equipped with the new Hawker Nimrod and Osprey types.

GEN. AGUINALDO
IN HONG KONG*Leader Of Philippine
Mission.*SEEKS MODIFICATION OF P. I.
INDEPENDENCE BILL

General Emilio Aguinaldo, famous leader of the Philippine insurrection and first President of the short-lived Philippine Republic, arrived in Hong Kong this morning on board the "President Coolidge."

He is on his way to America as one of the heads of a mixed mission which will campaign for the modification of the recently passed Philippine Independence Bill or for the enactment of another measure which will conform to the wishes of the Filipino people.

Accompanying him on this, his first trip to the western Continent, are members of his family, each of whom has achieved national distinction. J. P. Melencio, the General's son-in-law, is one of the foremost Philippine orators. For several years he was director of the Philippine Press Bureau in Washington, D.C. Returning to the Islands after a distinguished career abroad he became a member of the Philippine Legislature. At present he is ranking Assistant to the Solicitor-General.

Mrs. Carmen A. Melencio is no less distinguished. She pursued studies at Illinois University and later at Wellesley College, U.S.A. She is a well-known educator and author, and in Philippine society she is one of the leading hostesses. Mrs. Emilio Aguinaldo, also accompanying the General, belongs to the historic Agoncillo family of Batangas, P.I. Her uncle, Don Felipe Agoncillo, was Philippine Minister Plenipotentiary to Paris during the Philippine regime, and later was Ambassador to Washington.

Hostage in Hong Kong.

It will be recalled that more than three decades ago, just before the Spanish-American war, General Aguinaldo stayed in Hong Kong with his general staff as hostages in pursuance of the terms of the Blak-Na-Bato Pact between Spain and the Philippines. The late Premier Primo de Rivera took a leading part in those famous negotiations and was the one who escorted Aguinaldo to Hong Kong.

At the end of the Filipino-American war General Aguinaldo took the oath of loyalty to American Sovereignty and the whole world knows he has honoured that oath with the zeal of a Regulus. He has kept himself in splendid isolation, away from politics, except in very rare instances when he felt it was his duty to rebuke corrupt officials or denounce injustices. He has been devoting most of his time to his farm. Yet his loyalty to the cause of his people has never been questioned.

Upon the passage of the Hawes-Cutting bill promising independence to the Philippines after the lapse of 12 years subject to the approval of the Filipino people, public opinion in the Islands became divided on the issue of acceptance, and a bitter controversy has been raging.

The Filipinos vigorously object to certain provisions in the act which restrict trade and immigration before the actual grant of freedom.

General Aguinaldo's principal objection is in connection with the provision giving America the right to reserve and hold certain areas as military or naval bases.

Thus, as a Cincinnati of the Far East, General Aguinaldo leaves his farm, at the behest of his people, "old but not bent with age," and is proceeding to America to peacefully plead for a final solution of a problem, which will prove satisfactory to America and the Philippines alike. In sending General Aguinaldo to America, the Filipinos have drawn their last card in their peaceful campaign for freedom.

To-Day's Short Story.THE SHADOW*By Val
Guest.

"THE Art in Crime," said Mr. Edward Brandt carefully, "is going to the dogs. There was a time when the finesse and patience lavished upon a transfer of property was good to behold. Now we have the uneloquent smash and grab. The element of 'Theatre' has been eliminated, and I mourn the lost drama of my profession. Possibly you are looking upon me in the light of a fool; yet I have tried unceasingly, my dear Lou, to bring back, in the course of my last few denials, to bring back the romance of my predecessors, Turpin and Robin Hood."

He spoke with the slow, studied delivery of a Shakespearean actor, as though he were reciting a carefully-rehearsed speech, and Lou Brandt listened with admiration.

Breakfast had just been cleared in the tidy little maisonnette where this extraordinary couple lived. Brandt himself, sitting by the window, with a half-read newspaper in his hands, was a small, prematurely-grey man of forty-five. A burglar by profession, he had an unexplainable love for the dramatic. Crime films left him in a daze of wonderment and ambition. Crook plays thrilled him to an almost fanatical extent. It was his kink in this direction that made him leave a note signed by "The Shadow" at each of the places he had plundered. Up to the present Scotland Yard had been unable to pin the pseudonym on to any concrete person.

"I suppose some people would call me mad," he went on slowly. "Maybe I am."

Edward Brandt immersed himself in his paper again. Soon he chuckled.

"The amazing Mr. Henderson has excelled himself," he said. "Listen to this."

He folded the paper carefully to the desired paragraph and followed the lines with a slender forefinger as he read:

"Last night the fifth of 'The Shadow' burglaries took place in Lexicon-crescent. The police arrived on the scene barely fifteen minutes after the robbery had been committed. Besides a large amount of jewellery, several valuable gold trophies were stolen. The precision with which the plunderer picked out the best of the articles of value in each of these hands indicates that he is a connoisseur. Detective-inspector Henderson, who is in charge of the case, states that the police are now of the opinion that the long list of Shadow-coups is the work of one person, not of a gang, as at first believed. The police are confident of an early arrest.

"Oh!"

It was not a gasp, it was not a sigh. It had the quality of both. Brandt looked up and saw his daughter pale. Few people who saw these two together realised that this pretty, golden-haired woman with the pale blue eyes and full lips was the only child of this amazing little man she worshipped. He crossed over to her and took her head in his hands.

"There, there, little one—there is nothing to fear. The police are always confident of an arrest. They have to be." He grasped her by the shoulder. "Lou, if Henderson does get me one day, you are not going to be silly about it, are you? You are going to take it like a Brandt. You are going to smile and say, 'Well, it's curtains on the old man for a while.' You are going to wait for me like . . . He broke off and laughed. "But it's ridiculous to talk like this. I have never slipped yet, and it is not likely that at my time of life . . ."

"But if Henderson comes here again?"

He rose to his feet.

"Lou, I have something to tell you. Last night there was a slight hitch. I walked smack into a man in evening dress just as I came out of the gate. There wasn't a soul else in the street. He must have been very close to the railings, or I would have seen him before I ventured out. He stared hard at me, apologised and passed on into the darkness."

Lou drew a deep breath.

"They'll get him to testify against you—oh, my God!"

He silenced her with a gesture.

"We must not look for trouble, Lou. There are six million people in this city. There is more than an even chance that this man has not connected the incidents at all. We shall have Henderson round, doubtless—he has been here after each one of the Shadow transactions—but it will be to bluff and try once again to break my alibis by tripping me up. You must always be nice to Mr. Henderson, Lou. Beneath his police force exterior he is a very charming man."

Inspector Wesley Henderson had just written the last line to a very long report on the Shadow robberies to headquarters. He blotted the document and enclosed it in its official envelope and glanced up at the clock. It was a quarter to twelve.

At twelve he had a call to make. From the police station to the house of Mr. Edward Brandt was barely ten minutes' walk. The detective mounted the steps and rang the bell as the neighbouring clock chimed the hour. Lou answered his summons.

"Good morning, Lou," said Henderson and walked past her into the little hallway, and from there into the living-room. She followed him uneasily.

"Mr. Brandt is?"

"No, he's gone out," she said. "Did you want to see him?"

"No," he said carelessly, and his eyes strayed round the room. "Nice little apartment you've got here. He casually looked inside the piano. "I'll wait. Would you be so kind as to go down and tell my man outside that I'm waiting for your father?"

She faced him squarely.

"Certainly, if you'll be so kind as to come out of this room and let me lock the door."

He laughed.

"Just the laughter of your father, eh? 'Beard' I'm going to poke around a bit without the formality of a warrant! Well, I've got the warrant now!"

"He handed her the slip."

"I'm afraid you'll have to wait," she said coldly.

"Barely five minutes later Brandt arrived."

SOCCER ADVICE BY ALEX. JACKSON

ONE of the greatest wing forwards of modern times recently gave a few friendly words of advice to another young outside forward who promises, before long, to attain international class.

He was Alex. Jackson, the ex-Chelsea and Scottish International outside-right, who is now in the Margate team, and the object of his few benevolent words was Morton, the young West Ham wing forward, who is regarded as one of the greatest "fads" that the London team has made in recent years.

Admitted Morton, Jackson told a correspondent of a London newspaper that he had seen Morton and admired him tremendously. So greatly was he impressed by the West Ham boy that he wished to point out the only weakness that he could see in his play.

The weakness, explained Jackson, was a habit of turning back sharply when chased down the wing by an opposing defender. It is simple to beat an opponent that way, and it is tempting to do so when the chance of getting the ball over without stopping seems remote.

"But the danger is when the winger stops, his other forwards are running on and by the time he gets the ball over they are offside." "When it was put to Jackson that there must be times when it is impossible for a winger to beat an opponent and centre without pulling the ball back, the old Chelsea player merely replied with a smile: 'It's the man who cannot recognise the impossible when he sees it who wins at football.'"

Jackson did not wish it to be thought that he was pointing out an elementary fault in the play of Morton. "It is a common mistake," he said, "to think that a winger should be able to beat an opponent and centre without pulling the ball back, the old Chelsea player merely replied with a smile: 'It's the man who cannot recognise the impossible when he sees it who wins at football.'"

GOSSIP IN SPORTS WORLD

Polish Tennis Star: "Ashes" On View
Al Brown Disappoints.

By ROVER

Polish Star.

THERE was a particularly good men's singles final and an exceedingly interesting women's singles final at the Queen's Club covered-courts tournament, when H. W. Austin beat H. G. N. Lee by 11-9; 8-6, 7-5 in the former event, and Mlle. Jadwiga Jedzejowska, of Poland, defeated Miss B. Nuthall by 6-0, 4-6, 6-3, in the latter.

Mlle. Jedzejowska also beat Miss Stammers in the semi-final, and may easily make a big show at Wimbledon when she visits England again later in the season. Miss Nuthall intends to play more championship tennis this year.

Wimbledon Lure.
MISS JEDZEJOWSKA, who is called "Ja Ja," has returned to Poland, but, after her latest and greatest victory, she confided her hopes of soon living in England. This powerfully built young woman with a great tennis future normally spends eight hours a day at a typewriter in Cracow. She went back to work.

"I came to learn English," she said at lunch, "and I have learnt tennis, don't you think, yes? One day, perhaps, I stay here—at the Embassy—a secretary, yes! I shall play at Wimbledon this year and in the French and German championships," she added. "I like grass courts. I like these wood courts of Queen's Club too. But best of all I love Wimbledon."

Ladies' Tennis

THE decision of the L.T.A.'s men selectors to recommend the women's sub-committee, which has hitherto helped them with the selection of women's teams, has come as no surprise to those in the inner circles of lawn tennis.

There has always been a division of opinion among the men selectors about the advisability of consulting women about the fitness of women to represent Britain in international matches. That the selectors have at last decided to bow not so much to public opinion or the twitting of their friends on the council, but to the dissatisfaction among the younger girl players who felt that they were not being given proper consideration or a fair show in the big games. The fact that two Wightman Cup matches have been lost in succession to America, provides simple support for their claims.

Champion Warned.

A RECORD crowd of 20,000 was present at Milan when Al Brown, of America, the world's bantam-weight champion, successfully defended his title against Domenico Bernasconi, the Italian and European champion. The coloured holder was given a points decision, which was warmly applauded. Brown won every round, according to a statement by the referee.

The contest, the first world title bout ever staged in Italy, was not a satisfactory one. In the early stages Brown was repeatedly warned by the referee, and after he had been spoken to in the third and fourth rounds the referee stopped the fight to warn Brown that if he had occasion to caution him again he would promptly disqualify him. This warning had the effect of improving the quality of the boxing, but it never reached a high standard for a title bout. There was too much in-fighting and holding, and the critics described it as more akin to a wrestling bout than a boxing match.

Newmarket Trainer

THE news has reached us of the sudden death from heart disease of Walter Griggs, at one time a well-known jockey and afterwards a successful trainer at Newmarket. In recent years he had put on so much weight that it was hard for those who had not known him to believe he had once ridden as a light-weight jockey. Yet, this rotundity served to add to his local fame.

As a jockey he was neither brilliant nor truly artistic, but he was good enough to beat great horses. Charles Morton and Mr. J. W. Gifford, as jockeys, were his regular partners. At one period he was meeting with a deal of success, but the St. Leger in 1926 was his last race.

Black Jester exactly twenty years ago.

As a trainer he was painstaking, shrewd, believed in getting to business early in the season, and undoubtedly clever at placing his horses in their right categories. There were no children by his marriage with the sister of Fred Rickaby, the fine jockey who was killed in the war, but the two boys, F. and W. Rickaby, who were left fatherless, were ever his first concern, and certainly none could have given them better advice and been prouder of their achievements in the saddle than their uncle and mentor. His cheery laugh and his interesting personality will be sadly missed. He was aged 44.

"The Ashes" On Show.

WE HEAR that Lord Westmorland, who is putting in so much work to assure success for the forthcoming exhibition of national sporting trophies, has persuaded the M.C.C. to agree to permit the inclusion of the urn containing the recently regained "Ashes." The urn and its contents possess practically no intrinsic worth, but their historical and sentimental value is great. Accordingly the M.C.C. has very properly insisted that special precautions should be taken for the safety of their small treasure.

It is on the authority of the Dowager Lady Darnley we have it that it was Lady Clarke, wife of Sir W. J. Clarke, who in 1883, when Lord Darnley (then Ivo Bligh) had avenged England's defeat at the hands of Australia in the previous year, "found a little wooden urn burnt a ball, put the ashes in the urn, and wrapping it in a red velvet bag, put it into Ivo's hands." The inspiration was a happy one, for in 1882 there had appeared the famous obituary in affectionate memory of English cricket, "whose demise was deeply lamented and whose body would be cremated and the ashes taken to Australia."

Boness Leaves Scottish
First Division.

London, April 14.
At a meeting of the shareholders of the Boness Football Club, a resolution was passed winding up the company. Boness were expelled from the Scottish League in November last for failure to pay certain outstanding debts of guarantee money.

Mr. Campbell Falkirk, who was appointed liquidator, said that the club was in a very sound financial position until promoted to the First Division of the Scottish League. A single year's experience in the First Division, with heavy guarantees and other expenses, had ruined the club.

This announcement that a football team literally has been ruined by success may occasion some surprise. Yet it is not uncommon to hear it said in English football circles that such-and-such a team are not keen on promotion. This is tantamount to saying that the club in question and its more profitable to continue in their present sphere. It is natural that many of these rumours are greatly exaggerated, and some are entirely false. Yet the fact remains that there is a certain amount of truth in the assertion that success in the league is not always of financial benefit to a club.—Rover.

Although from a playing point of view Hampshire Cricket Club found last season their most successful since they experienced a heavy financial loss. The club's financial position, however, was not so good as it seemed. The club's financial position, however, was not so good as it seemed. THE SHADOW

"Well, well, friend Henderson," he said as he peeled off his coat. "Got a warrant, eh? Well, I expected this would come. Shoot ahead—I'll help any way I can. Nice day for April."

"I don't expect you've left much around," said Henderson with a shrug. Then: "Another Shadow burglary last night, Brandt."

"So I read. You hope for an early arrest?"

Henderson scratched his chin. "We mean to make an early arrest," he corrected, and saw the other's lips twitch.

"More power to you," said Brandt. He opened his cigarette case and, extracting a gold-tipped cylinder, lit it.

"I suppose you want to know where I was last night. After all, I am the suspected party still, am I not?"

The detective was inspecting his vis-a-vis earnestly.

"You know, one of these days there's going to be some tiny little thing that you won't think of, Brandt, and on that tiny little thing will hang the threads of your last dramatic curtain."

"All the world's a stage, and men and women merely players," quoted Edward Brandt coolly.

There was a pause in the conversation. Henderson made a rapid search of the malsonnette without result.

"I've no doubt you have several cast-iron alibis to account for your movements last night."

The grey-haired man puffed steadily at his cigarette and watched the street below.

"Of course," he said. The detective sat down, helped himself to a cigarette, and lit it deliberately before replying.

"We know what The Shadow is like," he said, through a cloud of smoke.

Brandt took a long draw and inhaled. Had the man in evening dress come forward? He wondered.

"From a reconstruction of the facts in our possession we know that The Shadow is very much like you—or me. Just an ordinary everyday person whom nobody would suspect of pulling down a comfortable income out of plundering wealthy dressing-tables. You understand, Brandt?"

Brandt nodded. "I see I am still under suspicion," he said.

"Nobody is under suspicion," said the detective calmly. "Your alibis are irreproachable." He rose to go.

"Pretty smart kid of yours, Lou, I was going to snoop around before you came in, but she wasn't having any."

"Do you suspect her, too?"

"No. That is, unless..."

"Unless what?" asked Brandt sharply.

"Unless a certain gentleman we have at the station can identify her as the person he saw last night in Lexicon-crescent about the time of the robbery. I'll bring him round this afternoon. Good morning, Mr. Brandt."

Lou heard him whistling a tune as he let himself out and she hurried to the living room. She found her father gazing curiously at the opposite side of the street.

"They have found him," he said, without turning, "unless he is bluffing."

The girl sank into a chair by the table and the colour left her face. "You must go!" she cried. "You can't wait here. I can pack in a few minutes..." she sprang to her feet. "Father! Do you hear?"

He silenced her.

"Stuff! It's probably just a piece of bluff to make me do the very thing you are suggesting." He took her in his arms. "Don't you see, Lou, child, if I run out now I am as good as confessing. Besides," he added, leading her to the window, "there is a gentleman on the other side of the street apparently absorbed in the areas over there. He is Henderson's man. I should be followed. No, Lou, we must wait. I have an idea that this is one of Mr. Henderson's tricks. He is banking on the fact that it may have been too dark for me to notice who was in the street. He is going to trip himself up, because I would recognize our friend in the evening dress anywhere. Don't you see, child, he is going to bring along one of his own men in the hope that it will frighten a confession out of me. Well, he is in for a shock. There was only one person in the street last night, and I know his face like my own. Let us have lunch."

Back in the police station Inspector Wesley Henderson was in deep conversation with a well-dressed man who was listening intently to the detective's words.

"It may come off," said Henderson. "It's a long shot, but it's worth trying if you are game."

"Count me in," said the man.

"Personally, I have every reason to believe we shall get that confession. Brandt is a philosophical sort of devil, and in some things he's almost a child. This will be the sort of theatrical trick which would appeal to his nature, and if he thought the game was up he'd give us little trouble."

The man nodded.

"Then let us try, by all means."

It was obvious that her father was nervous, and Lou watched with a growing alarm the way every pedestrian who passed the house seemed to set the little man jumping expectantly.

Suddenly there came a ring on the front door bell, and Edward Brandt ran to the window, pulled aside the curtain and staggered back.

"It's him!" he said huskily. "Henderson and the man. By God! They've found him... him!"

Again the ring.

"I'll go in the bedroom. Tell them I'm out," he said, and crept into the back room.

With her head reeling, Lou opened the front door and stammered her message.

"Out, is he?" said Henderson good-humouredly. "Funny my man didn't see him. Come now, Lou, you shouldn't tell stories like that. I want to see him."

"He's gone out—out the back way..." said the girl frantically.

Henderson pushed his way past her and, taking his companion by the arm, ushered him into the living room.

"I think I know the way to the bedroom. You wait here."

She stood, half petrified with terror as she heard the detective put his shoulder to the bedroom door. There was a shout inside the room and Edward Brandt came out slowly.

"All right, Henderson," he smiled weakly. "Don't break the door. I'm here." He turned to the stranger who was sitting in the chair by the window. "I don't suppose it is much use bluffing it out now. This gentleman and I came face to face and I remember his face as well as he must remember mine."

"So it is final curtain, eh, Brandt?"

"Yes—I am the Shadow. Funny thing, you always said it would be a small thing that would trip me up. Just bumping into someone by chance! May I say good-bye to Lou?"

"As they took him, down to the cells Henderson took his arm.

"You know, Brandt," he said, "but for your own confession we'd never have been able to convict you."

"Staff!" said the other. "Why the man I bumped into could have testified me to Dartmouth in two shakes!"

"The mad you bumped into," said Henderson slowly. "Is totally blind—I had to lead him to your house."

"For a second the man's face flashed, then he smiled wilyly."

"That," said Mr. Edward Brandt, "is Dr. Dring."

ENGLAND WINS NEW LEAD IN SHIPBUILDING

Lloyd Returns Show 27,000 Ton Gain.

3 MONTHS' FIGURES

London. For the first time in three years, shipbuilding activities in Great Britain present a more favourable aspect.

According to returns issued by Lloyd's today, work on 27,000 more tons is proceeding than the total under construction for the three months ended March 31, this being the first quarterly increase registered since March 31, 1930.

Nevertheless, the total of 252,401 tons under construction is 120,572 tons below the tonnage building a year ago. In addition 65,000 tons are intended for registration abroad or for sale.

Construction abroad, 488,548 tons, showed a reduction of 52,000 tons as compared with the total on December 31, 1932, and was the lowest since December, 1909.

The five leading shipbuilding countries during the last quarter were: France 97,498 tons, Sweden 82,332 tons, Italy 59,098 tons, Japan 55,670 tons and Germany 52,565 tons.

A total of 77,305 tons of new shipping was begun in Britain. This was 5,000 more than the tonnage started during the whole of 1932.

Oil-tankers totalling 170,000 tons were under construction of which 153,000 tons were motor-ships, in which Sweden was particularly active.

The New York Herald-Tribune commenting on the discussions states that the Conference shows evidence of a "hard-headed appreciation of realities," and not an attitude that "everything in the garden is lovely."

The paper expresses an opinion that an international tariff truce may be one result of the discussions.—Reuter.

Causes of Slump.

In three brief years, the incredible happened, the consequence in part of commodity price declines and maldistribution of gold, but to an even greater extent of a practically universal resort to artificial trade barriers.

Major causes of the slump were:

(1) The purpose of many countries either through internal economic exigencies or thinly disguised motives of retaliation to discourage imports in general and those of American products in particular;
(2) Abandonment of the gold standard by a majority of countries, which caused disparity in national price levels;

WEARS SUIT OF OWN WEAVING.

Productive Hobby Of Port Pirie Resident.

Port Pirie, South Australia.

Weaving by hand loom is the hobby of Mr. T. W. Pool, of Port Pirie. In less than a year he has produced more than 55 yards of suit length material in various textures of tweed. He wears a suit of his own weaving, while his wife has made skirts, ties, and even a dainty little handbag from her husband's hand loom.

Mrs. Pool has also made a sports skirt of tweed material, and proposes later to produce material for curtains, mats and other useful purposes.

Mr. Pool has sent some of the material for suit lengths to Melbourne, and even in Scotland there is tweed suiting produced by Port Pirie's only weaver. His loom is said to be one of only three or four in South Australia.—Reuter.

(3) Resort by more than 30 countries to foreign exchange control plans, designed to discourage exports of gold by curbing merchandise imports where necessary; and
(4) The almost complete discontinuance of American new foreign loans abroad.—United Press.

U. S. RECOGNITION OF SOVIET.

Millions of dollars of old Czarist Government bonds are outstanding in America, and the Communist rulers have declined to pay any part of them. These bonds occasionally are quoted at extremely low figures in the curb market and sales are reported now and then.

The buyers apparently speculate on the possibility of the Stalin regime offering some compromise on these issues if Russia is granted recognition by U.S.A. — Reuter.

Always have GARDAN in the house!

In the tropics pain and illness are particularly liable to appear suddenly. In headache, toothache, neuralgia, rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, muscular pains, and above all in fever and its accompanying symptoms, GARDAN is of definite value.

When you are out of sorts remember:

prevents and stops pain
